Hospital Meetings

Interesting Meeting

On Wednesday and Thursday of last week, Artland had the pleasure of a visit from some Unity friends.

The party consisted of Mr. Needham, Dr. Reid of the Dept. of Health, Regina and Mr. J. H. Jones, member of the Unity Hospital committee.

Mrs. Dr. Routledge and Mrs. Mor-Aid Society were of the party.

The object of their visit was to organize and interest the residents of the Manitou Lake, Brady and Artland districts in the scheme for the establishment of a Union Hospital.

A meeting was held at Cliffe school house on the 8th instant.

We regret to say that the attendance was disappointing but those who were present had the pleasure of hearing a most interesting address from Mr. Needham, who in able terms sketched in general outline, the purposes and aims of the proposed new hospital.

Mr. Reid, a government representative, supplemented and supported Mr. Needham's observations, with interesting details from a departmental point of view.

On the 9th inst. Stannars school was the scene of a similar gathering to the above, favored by a fairly satisfactory attendance.

The same evening saw a largely attended meeting at Brady school. The audience displayed the greatest interest in the addresses delivered by Messrs. Needham and Reid.

In the course of the evening an Association was formed for the purpose of furthering and assisting the cause of the Hospital in the district. The following were appointed officers:

President—Mrs. R. Watson; Secretary—Mrs. M. L. Foran; Treasurer—Mrs. Reichelt.

A meeting of the Association will be held on the 15th instant, at the re-clock for the purpose of arranging details of the general work of the Association, and all the ladies of the district interested in the project are cordially invited to attend.

We feel sure that the whole district, while welcoming these friends from Unity, will loyally support them in their efforts towards rendering the Union Hospital scheme the complete success it deserves to attain.

We must not forget to mention that a Unity orchestra also accompanied our visitors; this combination, though made up for any little deficiencies in that respect by the charm of its music, largely contributing as it did to the success of the latter portion of the Brady meeting which was wound up with a dance.

With hearty good wishes for the success of this deserving Hospital scheme, we cherish the hope of again seeing our Unity friends in Artland at a not too distant date, with of course the—hand!

Preparations are proceeding apace for making December 21st 1920 a day to be remembered for a long time by the young people of this district. The sub-committees are working each to make their part of the evenings entertainment the best. The concert committee say that their program will rank as the best ever given in Brady school. The ladies who have the time in hand have spared no efforts in their department, and the numerous toys, etc., are going to make the young people gaze with astonishment and wonder. Special prizes are being procured for the most regular attendant in each of the Sunday school classes. The decorations will be a feast for the eyes, and a dance to wind up with. What more could any one want and all in one night too?

It is to be hoped that the weather will play up o' its duty, and that the crowd will repay the efforts of the organizers. Tickets $1.00. Can be had at either of the stores in Artland, and off by any member of the committee. Ladies please bring hats.

Don't forget, Tuesday evening, December 21st 1920. Brady school at 8 p.m. Come and help us have a record time.

OUR COPYRIGHT SERIAL WRITTEN BY LOCAL VETERAN: "S.O.S."
SHORT STORIES OF A SOLDIER'S LIFE AT THE FRONT

AT ETAPLES, SEPTEMBER 1917

We had started on a long hike from Boulogne the morning before, landing, amid plenty of groans and curses, at the end of our journey, Etaples; and were now looking over our blisters with care, wondering all the time what kind of grub we were going to get while in this place.

After a round of the canteens, you being flush, buy a bunch of stink and retire to your sandy tent to eat and smoke your purchases. Of course there are a couple of pals to help you.

Taking a stroll round the camp to see how things are laid out, you plunge into an "old-timer" who you know, and of course if he is not smoking, out comes your cigarette case and you do him handsome. After looking at your brand of smoke he proceeds to light up, and then you spend an hour together going over old experiences and asking after old friends. Finally something happens to break up the talk (maybe the orderly sergeant is coming, with great precision, in your direction) and you think in the interests of you both, you had better do a hurried retreat. With a "Meet you night in front of the orderly room" you beat it, to get out of the room of the sergeant.

That afternoon the word comes around that there has been trouble down in Etaples, an M.P.'s has shot someone, and the boys are just wild to go into the town and let the M.P.'s have it strong. The order comes from headquarters that you are barred from going down to Etaples that night, and of course as a consequence some or the boys plan right away to be there with bells on. It is noted around that all the M.P.'s are in a compound under a strong guard, and naturally your interest in the affair attains a fever point.

On nosing around, you see them, from all the different camps, taking their ammunition to the central store Gee! this looks serious, and they must be expecting a general clean up of something, from the boys.

Things go off alright the first night and you are expecting to see the trouble calmed over without anything happening. At about 3:30 that afternoon you are reading in your tent, the "Bull ring"—one of the toughest drill parades in the world at that time—has been closed, on account of

SASK.

You have returned as per your promise, and are now on duty on the bridge, there is to your mind nothing to be on duty for as there are no mobs here, though they at the next bridge north (the Aussies) have been rushed and have left the bunch through.

A Y.M.C.A. covered Ford comes up the incline and you step out onto the roadway with your rifle at the "on guard". The glare of the headlights blind you, but the car stops and you look inside to see who is going over. It is a couple of canteen girls and one of the drivers, the girls are wearing a scared look, and so after looking inside to see no other passengers are carried you tell the driver, with a grin to proceed, he is again stopped by the other sentry at the other end of the bridge, and then he goes his way, and no doubt the poor girls are heaving a sigh of relief.

There is an approach up the side of the bridge by a narrow path, and you hear muttered oaths proceeding from this direction, and an occasional "Come on boys! hid! we can get over here, hid! all right, hid!" You step over the bridge and tell the other sentry, "There is a drunk and some twelve or so followers coming up the pathway, you could easily stop them in the pathway, but it is a nasty place and you might give them more than they want!" The other sentry says "Turn out" and the officer and about twenty men come up the slope on the double.

After seeing the mob go through the "Aussies", the boys are not going to let any bunch, large or small, go through here, they make three lines in the centre of the bridge and the officer comes through to you and you wait for the laboring party to come upon the roadway.

They finally get up and after looking over the array of opposition, the drunks say to the rest of his gang, "Come on boys, hid! Lets rush them!" The others stood still.

The officer walks out to the party and says, "Say boys! Don't you think it would be better to go home, take this drinkin' up with you and 'tale out suit?" "Compreess?" They seemed to, for they started on their way without further delay.

You are finally relieved and going down to the hut find that the twelve (the officer) has got a couple of cans of beer for the boys. Now what? I should say not!

We were not on guard there any more, and a few days after, the affair was blown over and we had a good time down in the town ang over in Prague.

GOING OUT FOR RATIONS

I had been at the sniping school for a few weeks and on getting back to the transport lines of my own unit, I found the battalion was in the line at Loos. Getting all my spare cash in hand I started on a round of canteens and soon had a nice stock of cigarettes with me. My old pal Jimmie had also been down to the school and we were going in the line together that night when the rations went up.

During the afternoon we hunted around and found out from various sources what the line was like in that part, as neither of us had been in Loos before. We also asked about our pals and were glad to learn that they were all right.

Finally, when it came dusk, the wagons with the rations started up in their wake. We arrived at the ration dump all right and started up the line to our section with the men who had come out for our rations.

We were following a trail and as it was not very well outlined we were constantly getting off it, but we came along to a short piece of sunken road, and were making our way up this when old Heinie started up a machine gun somewhere behind his line and the bullets were dropping all around us, but, as usual, we didn't get a scratch, though it sure made us bump it for a few yards. After we entered the trench we only went down it about 100 yards, then we turned to the right and went down the dug-out into the crowd. Of course we were greeted with the usual comments and it was not long before we knew the whole layout of posts, which was the best one, and which was the one it was well to keep our ears open when on.

The next day I was on duty on a post about 100 yards behind the line and as I was new to the front I went on the second relief. The post was one that had been built into the parapet and had sunk since it had been made, you could only see from it and, as the loop-hole was placed so near the top you had to go outside and shoot over the top if you saw anything to shoot at.

That night Jimmie and myself were to go on ration party with two others and while the time came to go

we said nothing, there was Tom,

J. McCombe, Jimmie and myself

(the centre two were afterwards killed)

and the first named lost his left leg at Amiens). We pulled steadily in the direction of the town of Loos keeping our eye open for the machine gun of the previous night. As we were passing the place where the machine gun usually opened we were breathing a little more freely.

J. McCombe was ahead and I was next to him, we were on the top of a ridge of ground when we heard a shell coming in our direction and knew it would land close. I crouched when the shell got nearer and when it dropped 30 yards behind us J. McCombe pitched into a nearby shell-hole head first, well, as the pieces of shell had sifted through us I naturally thought that he was hit, odd ran up to the hole and said, "Are you hit, Jock?" He did not answer, but got up and went on as though nothing had happened. We finally got the rations and started on the way back. We were going along pretty good when the man in front said he was not that spot, so we decided to go to the right and see what we would hit. We had not gone far when we got into a trench, and as it proved to be a kind of a cross between a maze and London in a fog, we decided to try out on top again, and accordingly got onto the top. It was not long before we heard some talking over to our left and on investigation it proved to be a party carrying in coy. rations. We followed them from there to the trench. As son as the trench was reached there was an awful smell of onion and mustard gas and as we had not far to go we put our fingers over our noses and went the rest of the way on the double, to hear when we got into the dugout that Fritz had given them a lively stirring with gas shells while we were away.

he was supplied with enough Elite Stock seed by the department of field husbandry to seed a minimum of one acre. This was sown on clean land in each case, and inspected by an officer of the department when the crops were nearing maturity. These members have now harvested approximately 2,000 bushels of seed which is eligible for registration. This seed is not being offered for sale this year, but it will be all seeded in the spring of 1921. It is now too soon to predict, but it seems reasonable to expect 75,000 bushels of seed in the fall of 1921, all of which may be registered as second generation stock.

The time seemed ripe for an organization "C.C." this character, and a beginning was made. During the winter season of 1919 and 1920 some twenty-five men were organized into seven seed centres of "local crop improvement associations." Each mem-

A few of the disgruntled ones tell us that we don't get all the news and consequently do not print it in our newspapers. Perhaps this is true, and oft-times the truth of such charges is brought home to us; but if anyone could do better, or could suggest how it's done, for the love of Mike, show us how.

It is admitted by one and all the Chauvin's main fear at this time of the year—and almost every other small town—is that of a disastrous fire. It is then, the duty of every citizen to take extra precaution, see that chimneys are safe; stove pipes secure and clean; and above all that live ashes are not thrown out to be scattered broadcast by the wind.

Fires Too Frequent

It would seem that no matter how much is said regarding precaution against fires, they will continue their career of destruction. Hardly a day passes that we do not hear of more or less destructive fires in some part of the country.

It looks as if people generally put too much confidence in fire-fighting apparatus, without the assistance of precaution. The number of chemical or other appliances to safeguard property from fire is growing every year, but there does not appear to be a reduction in the number of places burned. What the country needs mostly from all appearances is fire protection, and not fire cure. There is, in many cases, too much chance taken.

In eastern Canada and the United States the complaint is made that this winter is almost as bad as last. In the very best part of Canada the winter has been delightful.

Dry Majority: 18596

A new compilation of the returns of the recent prohibition referendum has been made, showing the results of the vote by provincial constituencies as well as with sixteen towns in 1915. These were Athabasca, Beaver Lake, Bow Valley, Edson Ground, Lethbridge, Little Bow, Mountain, St. Paul, St. Albert, Stony Plain, Victoria and Whitefish.

Three constituencies that were wet in 1915 went dry this year, Sturgeon, Redcliffe, and Pincher changing over to the prohibition side. Lethbridge and MacLeod which went dry five years ago, voted wet this time.

Next SessionLegislature January

Although no date has definitely been fixed upon by the executive council of the government it is probable that the next session of the provincial legislature will be called about January 20.

For some time it has been freely admitted by Premier Stewart and other ministers of the government that the next session would be summoned earlier than for the past two or three years. A few days ago it was reported that in all probability the house would assemble about January 15th. However, it was stated on reliable authority, Tuesday, that the opening would not be before Thursday, January 20th, and if the present present plans hold this date will likely be determined upon when the ministers are all in town, and a regular meeting of the executive council is held.

A fairly long session appears to be in prospect, since by convening earlier the house will be able to devote more time to business than was the case last session when the opening took place early in February and only by dint of steady grinding and a long period of night sittings was the program completed by April. It was conceded by the government leaders on more than one occasion during the last session that it would be hopeless to expect any future session to be confined to a space of two months.

What of Wheat Prices?

The most conspicuous feature of the wheat market for the past two months has been its weakness. A few signs of strength are seen now and then but the weakness is general. The chief cause of the general weakness is the downward movement in prices. All commodities are being affected. It is all very well for certain interests to claim that the particular commodities they produce or have on their shelves or in their warehouses, cannot decrease in price because high-priced labor and expensive materials were involved in the production of them and will not sell for less than the cost of production. They will either sell for less than peak prices, or else will not sell at all. This price movement is general. Every interest is going to bear its share in the loss that is inevitable in the deflation now underway just as they shared the profit in the inflation of values since 1915. Anyone who thinks he has a "peculiar" commodity, one that will not be affected by this present readjustment of values, is theorizing on unsound premises.

Naturally we all feel very much the same regarding the particular product we have for sale. The man working for wages can prove to his own satisfaction that wages cannot be reduced until the cost of living comes down. The retailer protests with equal violence against any suggestion of lower prices, alleging that prices cannot come down until the high priced goods on his shelves are disposed of; he, according to his own statement, is not in business for fun. The manufacturer with costly raw material on hand and warehouses full of the finished product produced at war-times cost for labor and material claims that he cannot take a nickel less than he is asking for his commodity and will not cut the prices. The farmer with his wheat in the granary or in the storage elevator—wheat that has been produced at a high cost for labor and everything else that goes into production—is keen to keep the prices up, and justifies himself by the use of the same arguments as are used by the wage earner, retailer, and manufacturer. We want to dispose of our product at the high price.

In a brief way the cause of the present price reaction is this. For five years the prices have been going up. There was every reason why they should go up, nor are worldwide upward movements in prices new. The peculiarity about this one is that it was by far the greatest advance in prices ever seen in a given time. History holds no parallel to it. We have seen great up and down movements before, but nothing to compare to this. We have seen too, that always following a period of high prices comes a period of reaction—a period of lower prices—and that the two periods just about balance each other in length and action. And further, that a great downward or upward movement in prices is general, not confined to any one commodity or group of commodities, but involves everything. One can recall that condition very similar to those now developing were experienced in the nineties and again about 1907; and that we had a temporary price reaction in 1914 and if memory carries back to the early eighties, or to the years following the civil war in the United States it will be seen that price depressions followed by expansion, to be succeeded in due time by a downward swing, has been the order for more than fifty years—has been the order of business, in fact, as far back as the records go.

Competent observers are convinced that we are now at the beginning of the downward movement that is the natural consequence of the five-year expansion and value inflation resulting from the war. If they are right—and the present movement has a number of the earmarks of being general and of some length—setting our faces against the inevitable is not going to get anywhere, except into worse difficulties.

It is clear that the present movement is widespread—the entire world is already involved. It was ushered in as all former periods of reaction were—by industrial slowing down, and men being thrown out of work, and banks curtailing loans. Its effect on the public is spending money, and reducing prices. Its effect on people stops longer to buy—failures in endeavour to sales. More closely present whether they like it or nots occur as part of the large movements mentioned, or whether it is the real thing, the great depression itself. The point must be decided by the individual himself.

What will be the ultimate effect on wheat prices? If the movement now underway runs its course, wheat prices have seen their peak and are now receding. If it is a temporary movement wheat prices may advance for a time and later slip back. The slump has already been so serious that a temporary reaction might be expected as a natural result. But that prospect is by no means certain. From the way the market acts at present lower rather than higher prices are suggested. It may not be right or just for wheat prices to go lower than they are, or for them to remain at present levels, but unfortunately it is with the situation as it is and not with the situation as we would like to see it, that we are concerned. And the facts make one feel bashful. The wheat market lacks strength. It is easier to send the prices down than it is to send them up; a little selling will send them down; buyers are scarce. It is hard to see how, with the demand what it is, large supplies in this continent and the crop of the southern hemisphere coming to harvest, much strength will accumulate.

Careful review of the wheat situation as at present shows ample supplies coming forward for the buying countries: important wheat-consuming countries cut off from supplies because they are unable to finance purchases; the prospect of a customs tariff on Canadian wheat entering the States; and increasing business depression and unemployment. These are the factors that depress wheat prices. On the other hand, opposing them, we have the European unrest, which may involve some of the powers in war; the chance of the crop of South America and Australia not making as big as millions of bushels as are now expected; the effect of withholding of wheat from market by the Canadian and American farmers—the "farmers' strike" as it is called in the States—and the chance of credits being extended to European countries that they may buy wheat. These factors are all important, but three of them are only possibilities. The price depressing influences, unfortunately are all very real and seemingly strong and effective.

Wheat Growing Costs

The following is a simple way of computing farmers' grain-growing costs in the last two years. The figures quoted are not thoroughly exact, but they are close enough for cost computations and it seems to me to be as simple a way of getting at the overhead as any other method.

We assume that the farmer has a quarter-section of land and as a basis of calculation is putting one hundred acres in wheat, also that he has his house built and his machinery, which is well within the average mark in the west.

Interest on his estimated $6,000 capital at 5 per cent., ruling rate if he borrows the money $450.00

Seed and planting—$2.25 per bushel, 1½ bushels to the acre 375.00

Twine—average two pounds to the acre at 20c 40.00

BIG DRY DOCK NEARLY FINISHED

The Canadian Recruit's repair bill will total in round figures $300,000 which in addition to being out of service for twelve months represents a heavy loss to underwriters.

Results Obtained At Lacombe

The results of the tests with wheat at the Lacombe experimental station show that under the conditions that existed this year, Ruby and Bobo are among the earliest in maturity of most of the common varieties. Bobo yielded 46 2-2 bushels and matured in 108 days; and Bobo yielded 46 bushels and matured in 108 days.

Ruby and Marquis are the highest-yielders, going 58 bushels per acre and maturing in 114 days. Kitchener also yielded high, going 58 bushels per acre and maturing in the same time.

Marquis Dominion Chemical, a new strain of Marquis that has been tested out for two or three years, yielded 54 bushels per acre, and Marquis 50 bushels. Both of these varieties matured in 114 days.

An unnamed variety of wheat that is being tested out matured in a shorter time and yielded heavier than any of the other varieties. It matured in 98 days and went 60 bushels to the acre, which is an outstanding yield, considering that the precipitation during the growing season this year was only 8.8 inches.

The yields of oats were also fairly good. Irish Victory yielded 55 bushels and matured in 107 days. Leader, a new variety that is becoming fairly popular in some districts, were 70 bushels per acre, maturing at the same time. Banner matured seven days earlier and yielded 67 bushels per acre.

Trebline barley, a new variety, that is being tested out, yielded 75 bushels per acre, which is five bushels more than the yield of Barts barley, and matured in 92 days, while Barts barley matured in 100 days. The O.A.C. No. 21 yielded somewhat less, going 60 bushels per acre and maturing in 94 days.

The following tables show the yields per acre and the number of days required for maturity.
